From the Rhode Island Judiciary

‘Art in the Courthouse’ returns to Wakefield

March 25, 2015: The Rhode Island Judiciary announces a one-woman art exhibit, “Celebrating the Life and Art of Janice Causey,” opening on Saturday, April 11, 2015 and running through September 11, 2015. The exhibit, honoring the late Janice Causey of Narragansett, will be at the J. Howard McGrath Judicial Complex (Washington County Courthouse), located behind the Department of Motor Vehicles on Route 1 in Wakefield. Her collection includes photography and paintings using mixed media, oils and acrylics, stenciling and airbrushing.

A Providence native, Causey served the South County community as a dedicated teacher for 30 years, was a toy designer and was a regular at Narragansett Town Beach. As an avid surfer participating in a number of events, she was the 2000 East Coast Legends Surfing Champion. She passed away unexpectedly in September 2014.

The exhibit will be open 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The exhibit is part of the series “Art in the Courthouse” that appears occasionally in the McGrath Judicial Complex.
